

MADE INSANE BY EXCESSIVE HEAT

J. C. Uhr Under Surveillance at the Local Police Headquarters.

SEIZED AT RIVER SHORE

Fellow Boarders Follow Him From Lodgings When He Declares His Purpose to Sleep in Water.

J. C. Uhr, a stranger in the city, is confined at the police station, thought to have been rendered temporarily insane by the extreme heat of yesterday. Last night at 10 o'clock he went to his rooming place at 410 Seventh street, and acted peculiarly. As he walked by fellow-roomers and neighbors, among whom was Policeman Herman Sehnert, he made the remark that he knew they had been talking about him behind his back and that they had said various things which were not true and which he didn't want repeated. The men thought he had been drinking and they coaxed him up to his room and got him to bed.

Wants River for Bed.

About midnight he aroused the woman who has charge of the house and told her that he was going to spend the rest of the night in the bed of the river, where it would be cool, and he started off for that purpose. The woman believed that he intended to commit suicide, and she awakened two of her roomers and they set out after Uhr and found him just as he had reached the river bank. After a long argument and much persuasion they got him to accompany them back to Garnsey square, where the police, who had been notified of his strange actions, arrested him.

This morning the man's fancy had taken a new turn. He proclaimed to the officers that he could see right through his cell wall into the next cell and that a number of his friends and relatives were there. He asked permission to butt the wall down, as he said that was all that stood between him and his friends.

Keep Close Watch.

The officers at the station are keeping a close watch over the man and seeing that he does himself no harm until such time as he either recovers from the attack or is sent to Watertown. No knives are given him with his meals, as it is feared he might take his life.
